The question “Does interleague play improve attendance, and if so by how much?” is a question that is widely answered incorrectly. This talk discusses how to use this question as a classroom example to introduce the idea of a matched-pair study, explaining the flaws in the normal analysis and discussing the differences generated by a matched-pair analysis. (Received September 14, 2004)