Mathematics and biology faculty at Central Washington University collaborated to develop a module for use in either a pre-calculus or a genetics classroom. Using real data collected from a continuing onsite mark-recapture study of Pacific Treefrogs students explore Hardy-Weinberg equilibrium, genetic fitness and weighted selection. Mathematical tools used include elementary probability, polynomial equations, complex fractions, induction, and limits. (Received September 26, 2006)