Convincing students to "read the section before class" is an ongoing struggle. This talk will report on the use of WeBWorK (a web-based homework system) to foster such reading, compare it with some alternatives, and summarize the reactions of both professor and students. (Received September 14, 2006)